

Stefan GÖSSLING

Professor, Lund University

Stefan Gössling has studied aviation's contribution to climate change since the early 1990s, focusing in particular on the global expansion of tourism and the sector's growth in energy consumption and associated greenhouse gas emissions.

His works today include a wide range of related topics, such as demand distributions, technologies, sustainable fuels, and policies.